

The Christmas season kicked off in White Rock with a parade, tree-lighting

Party on the Peninsula

Uptown White Rock was buzzing with the Christmas spirit on Saturday (Nov. 26). Even the cold and the rain did not keep people from joining the festivities.

The 14th annual Christmas on the Peninsula returned to White Rock Community Centre and Miramar Village Plaza for the day.

The community centre boasted live entertainment, a children's stage, face-painting, a concession featuring home-baked goodies and a Christmas market.

Later in the afternoon, a Christmas parade made its way through the streets of uptown White Rock before ending at Miramar Village Plaza. A local church was handing out free hot chocolate.

The night ended with the Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony with Mayor Megan Knight and the Stella Maris Concert Choir. Shouts of celebration and joy could be heard as soon as the tree was turned on. Many families gathered in front of the tree to get a photo.
